The Socialists of the United States have at last done a consistent thing. They have nominated for President a man already in the penitentiary. Eugene Debs is his name and he is serving in the Federal prison at Atlanta for practicing what the socialists preach—disloyalty to government.

A food shortage threatens the nation. High wages in the cities have drawn so many able bodied men from the farms that it is impossible for those left in the country to produce the usual amount of food. The high prices of food in the cities next winter will make many of these men realize that they would have done better to stay on the farm, raise a good crop, and sell it to the city fellows for big prices.

SAVE MONEY NOW.

The present monetary situation is abnormal. It is estimated that a dollar is worth only fifty cents as compared with its former purchasing power. Money is confessedly abundant. Currency is inflated. Prices are high both for what is sold and what is bought. Wages, salaries, profits are greatly advanced. Nearly everybody is handling more cash than ever before.

When was there ever a better time to save? Self-denial, economy, frugality, exercised now, yield uncommon returns. To forego the elegance (or vanity) of a new suit this year will enable one to put in the savings bank for interest accumulations two or three times as much money as a similar privation would have saved formerly. Abstinence from the costly out of steak, from pleasure tickets, unnecessary travel, automobile luxuries, and the like, will pay very great dividends. Careful management of one's income, wise spending and the good sense of "doing without" are virtues that are at a premium. Such a chance to save has not been ours before.

The purchasing power of the dollar will some day return to its previous value. Then the money that has been laid by will be worth twice as much as at present.

While an orgy of spending is raging, the high minded, plain-living people ought to be self-poised enough to restrain themselves. They have an excellent opportunity to lay up some savings.—Exchange.

MOVING PICTURES.

The moving picture business is an attraction which probably is here to stay. It is capable of almost measureless values for good, as it is certainly often degraded to great offensiveness and evil. There should be most careful censoring of the pictures that are placed in the show houses for exhibition, and we have not yet come to a satisfactory basis. We have State and national boards, and they are supposed to be efficient in their oversight. But the standard varies with the taste and morals of those who constitute these boards. We consider ourselves a more moral and refined people than the Japanese, for instance, and yet it is a fact that recently the Japanese censor passed upon 4,291,000 feet of film that had passed the United States censorship and rejected all but 75,000 feet. He did not think that, on moral grounds, the rest was fit to be exhibited to the people of Japan. We are to consider how recklessly the young people of the United States are being dealt with—Herald and Presbyter.

WILSON WAS RIGHT.

Commenting on the fifth anniversary of the sinking of the Lusitania on May 7, the New York Times reviewed that incident and the course of the United States following it. The New York Times is deeply impressed by the wisdom shown by President Wilson in his conduct of national and international affairs from that date forward.

The torpedoing of the Lusitania seemed incredible to the American people. When it was indeed proved true and its significance was borne upon every mind, there were many who felt great dissatisfaction with the President because he did not immediately declare war. The President, however, saw further than those who thought we should act at once. Some of those who disagreed with him then, realized later that he was right, and said so. Mr. Joseph Choate, when the Lusitania was sunk, thought the President should have entered into war immediately; but a few years later he realized the wisdom of the President's course and publicly acknowledged that he had been wrong and the President right.

In 1915 Mr. Wilson knew that public opinion was not ready for war. He wisely waited until time and Germany had solidified it. Moreover, between 1915 and 1917 there was a mighty growth of our wealth, our material resources, our productive energies. When the hour came the United States was prepared, financially and industrially, to use the enormous magazines of wealth and power that she had been accumulating. The gospel of preparedness had supplanted the gospel of pacifism. On land and sea the United States was able to put forth tremendous and triumphant efforts. In the face of much sincere, if mistaken, criticism Mr. Wilson had followed the path justified by the moral and material facts. By a wise delay he saved civilization. Mr. Joseph H. Choate, whose last years were beautiful with devotion to and labor for the cause of the entente, admitted with characteristic magnanimity that Mr. Wilson's course was right.

Mr. Wilson was right in directing the nation's course into war; he is right in his plan for bringing it back to the ways of peace. This will be written in pages of history when Lodge, Knox, Johnson and their followers live only as stray leaves of autumn, blown by the winds, past the granite rock of Woodrow Wilson's enduring fame.—Louisville Post.

TIME TO WORK AND SAVE MONEY

With the countries of Europe all disorganized, with the economic machinery of the whole world almost scrapped, with this country in the grip of almost daily strikes, with the number of consumers overwhelmingly in excess of the number of producers, with farmers unable to plant their crops on account of the exodus of labor to the urban centers, with public and private extravagances which has increased the number of automobiles to the point of making the large amount of gasoline on hand but a small thing as compared with the demand, with the ordinary law of supply and demand rendered inoperative by the underhand manipulations of profiteers—with all this it would seem that now is the time for people of common sense and ordinary prevision to settle down on a policy of rigid economy and hard work. Yet as we look over the field we cannot find any evidences that such policy is very popular. In fact, the opposite seems to be the case. Will our people have to learn only in the stern school of financial panic?—Nashville Advocate.

LUKE McLUKE SAYS

Never show your ignorance by criticizing a painting that contains red grass and blue trees. Remember Art is Art.

The reason why a man sues for $50,000 is because he figures he'll be lucky if the jury awards him $500.

A great many men regard the Appendix and the Conscience as Excess Baggage.

If a lot of us were as big as we imagine we are, the streets would have to be widened.

Anyway, a Corn Fed girl would rather have Jacob's Ladders in her stockings than have wrinkles in them.

It is easy to tell a girl that you love her when you do not love her. But it is mighty hard to tell her that you love her when you do love her.

The main trouble with a Wife is that she nearly always wants to do something else.

We knew it! The first hot day we had in May, every second woman we saw was wearing furs.

Girls change the location of the waist line every now and then. But a fat woman can't change the location of something that doesn't exist.

A man usually waits until he has to use a skiff to get across the street before he thinks of saving up for a rainy day.

The biggest dummies in this country seem to do the most talking.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

YATESVILLE

Mrs. Luverna Adkins, widow of the late William Adkins, died on the 12th inst. She had lived a Christian life for many years past and died in the full triumph of faith. She was laid to rest in the family burial ground by the side of her husband, who had preceded her about two months. The burial services were conducted by the Rev. W. O. Spillman, who did some able talking both at the grave and at the house. Her daughter, Mrs. Mary Roffe, whose home is at Louisville, was in attendance at the burial, but another daughter, Mrs. May Littlefield, whose home is in Georgia, could not be reached by telegram in time for her to come through. All the rest of Mrs. Adkins' children, together with a host of sorrowing friends, were in attendance.

Two wells have gone in within the last few days, one a good gasser on the land of the Carter heirs and the other a good oil well on the land of Jack Collinsworth.
